A Doctor's Luck

By FRED L. YOUNG

Copyright, 1911, by American Press Association.

My friend and family physician, Dr. Parmeter, was trying to jolly me out of an attack of liver trouble or something of that nature the other day, and we got to talking of the difficulty of young professional men getting their start.

"There was a time," said the doctor, "when experience was considered the great desideratum and no doctor that hadn't a bald crown and white whiskers had much of a chance. But of late years such discoveries in the medical world have been made that what a doctor needs is to be kept up in his profession. I started in the day when old age was essential, and since I was very young and looked like a boy I had no show at all. Did I ever tell you how I got my start?"

"No."

"I set myself up to practice in a suburban town where a very rich man—a Mr. Billington—had his residence. I met him once on the train going out of the city, and, with a view to impressing him with my medical erudition, I talked a blue streak about toxins and antitoxins, transfusions and germ colonization. He seemed very much interested, but that was when Pasteur was just beginning his investigations, and Pasteur was the father of the whole business. I was foolish enough to hope that Mr. Billington would be so impressed with the interest I took in the new field I saw before me that if any of his family became ill he might call me in. Whether he didn't understand what I was talking about or was wedded to the experience theory of a doctor's value I don't know, but the same old coat continued to be his family physician.

One day my heart leaped in my throat when Mr. Billington's butler came to my office and asked if I could find it convenient to call. The fact is I was finding it very inconvenient because I didn't make calls. I went at once, but what was my chagrin to be taken to the stable. There were Mr. Billington, a veterinary surgeon, a groom and a coachman standing over a $1,500 horse, who was lying on his side, evidently ready to give his last kick.

"I hope you won't feel insulted, doctor," said Mr. Billington, "at my calling on you to save a horse, but he's a valuable animal, and my veterinarian here has given him up. Don't you think you can help us out?"

"I wanted to say, 'Why don't you call on your old bodyguard, who is doubtless making a thousand or two a year out of you?' but I didn't. I have a natural bent for making people feel easy about their sick and a special aptitude for bolstering up the sick themselves. I put on the wisest look I could and felt the animal's heart-beat. I didn't need to tell him to put out his tongue, for it was hanging out already, and meanwhile I was thinking of some experiment to make. As for knowing what was the matter with the horse, who couldn't tell me a single symptom, I hadn't the remotest idea. Presently an idea occurred to me.

"I must run over to the drug store," I said.

"Don't you go for you," said Mr. Billington.

"I must go myself. I don't know what they've got that I want, and I must find out."

"Off I started for the drug store, and when I got there I said to the druggist: 'Give me something that's rather bulky and harmless. I don't care what it is. I must have it right off.'"

"He looked about him, and, his eye catching some coarse bags, he said, 'I don't know of anything unless you take one of those bags of bathing salt.'"

"The very thing," I said. "Give me one at once."

"Fortunately there was nothing printed on the bags to give me away, so I seized one of them and hurried back to Mr. Billington's stable. When I got there I found that the veterinarian had pronounced the horse dead and had gone away in high dudgeon because a real doctor had been called in, which he considered a professional insult. I looked at the horse and had no more doubt myself that he was dead than that I was alive. Nevertheless, taking a handful of the salt from the bag, I sprinkled it on his tongue.

"It wasn't a minute before that tongue began slowly to move. It was drawn into the animal's mouth, the salt was swallowed, and the tongue was put out again. I dropped another handful on it, and again it was withdrawn and the salt swallowed.

"Well, sir, I kept on feeding the horse salt, which happened to be exactly what he needed, till he got up and stood on his feet.

"Everybody was astonished, including myself, but you can bet my astonishment didn't appear on the surface. Billington wrote me a check for $1,000, and I was then and there appointed his family physician.

"Those were the days when the doctors worked everything at haphazard. It's different now; there are things they know as exactly as two and two make four. Then there are other things they know pretty nearly. But I'm sorry to say that the bulk of their treatment is still guesswork, but that part grows less every day."

Parmeter's income is now some $30,000 from his profession alone.

HOUSE OF 433 MEMBERS.

This Reapportionment Plan Favored by the Committee On Census.

Washington, Jan. 7.—Congressional reapportionment under the new census figures so as to increase the membership of the House to 433 was the plan tentatively favored by the house committee on census at a meeting yesterday. This figure would protect each state from diminished numerical representation and is exclusive of Arizona and New Mexico. The committee will meet again Tuesday when Census Director Durand and two of his assistants, Messrs. Wilcox and Hill, each of whom has presented plans for the reapportionment, will discuss their views.

FAMOUS CHARTER MOVED.

That Granted by King Charles II Placed in Memorial Hall in Hartford.

Hartford, Conn., Jan. 7.—The famous charter granted by King Charles II and the copy of the Connecticut constitution of 1818 were removed with simple ceremony from the vaults in the state capitol and placed in their new repository in Memorial hall in the new state library and supreme court building Thursday. The removal was witnessed by Governor Baldwin and Chief Justice Frederic B. Hall of the supreme court and his associates. The governor spoke briefly of the history of the charter.

BELONGED TO GRACE.

Aviator's Cap and Glasses Were Undoubtedly His.

London, Jan. 7.—Word was received here yesterday that the aviator's cap and glasses picked up in the North sea of Mariakerke, Belgium, have been identified as those worn by Cecil Grace, who was lost while attempting to cross the English channel from Calais to Dover on December 22.

A diligent search of the coast in the vicinity of Mariakerke is being made in the hope of recovering the aviator's body.

Girls and Their Friends.

"Most of us start out in girlhood with rather definite opinions as to friendship," says Anne Bryan McCall in Woman's Home Companion for January. "A friend should be this or that. We have the matter all settled in our minds. And then, along comes some experience entirely outside our expectation. The friend to whom we have vowed undying devotion fails us in some essential and disappointing way. The structure we thought secure for all time falls suddenly. Some of us may perhaps sit among the ruins, bewailing and embittered; but the healthy minded girl faces the fact squarely and looks about for reasons.

"One reason our friendships fail is that we think of them as complete and established things. Friendship is a thing never complete—it is always in the making. A vow of friendship, no matter how earnest, is at best, only a promise to pay; whereas many of us mistake it for a payment in itself. Take any of those high qualities and requirements of every worth while friendship, loyalty, truth, honor, unselfishness, fidelity—does it occur to you that any one of these can be established once and for all? Indeed, it cannot. Loyalty yesterday is not loyalty to-day, nor will an unselfish act of the day that is past serve to meet the obligation of unselfishness of the day that is here. It is not a luxury, this, that can be bought and paid for and a receipt given. This love you have set yourself to share with some particular person is an obligation, a duty, a task and a difficult one that shall last your life long."

PEARY WILL APPEAR.

Explorer to Reply to Questions of the House Committee.

Washington, Jan. 7.—Capt. Robert E. Peary will appear before the House committee on naval affairs to-day to answer a running fire of questions concerning his polar achievements.

A subcommittee met yesterday and discussed the question of recognition of the explorer by act of Congress, particularly the bill introduced by Representative Bates of Pennsylvania to retire him as a naval constructor with the rank of rear admiral.

BOWERS' BRIEF FOR LABOR

Filed in Employers, Liability Case

TEST OF FEDERAL LAW

In the Supreme Court—It Applies Only to Interstate Trade—Wickersham Praises Argument of Dead Solicitor General.

Washington, Jan. 7.—On the logic of the dead, the department of justice will rest its case of upholding the protection of the living, extended by the employers' liability act of Congress. The department yesterday sent to the supreme court the brief of the late Lloyd W. Bowers, solicitor general, in defense of this act of Congress. Tacked to the brief was a tribute to Mr. Bowers from Attorney General Wickersham. It read: "The foregoing brief was prepared by the late solicitor general, with his accustomed care and ability. In order that it may properly be before the court, I adopt it and ask its consideration." The act which Mr. Bowers defended was passed in 1908 to replace the employers' liability act, declared unconstitutional by the supreme court, because it applied to interstate commerce, as well as to interstate trade. Mr. Bowers argued that the present law avoided this objection. He defended the law as a legitimate exercise of Congress over interstate commerce.

"Congress had a right to decide and decide," said he, "that railroad employees would not be killed or injured as often and would themselves feel more secure against killing and injury, if the rule of the common law, which makes an employee himself look out for and take the consequences of negligence of a co-employee, were changed so as to make the employer himself watchful against injury of one employee from negligence of another." The new policy was defended as making interstate commerce liable to less interruptions, more expeditious, more economical, more secure, and in all ways more efficient. Mr. Bowers took up the various features of the new law and presented a defense against the attacks which might be suggested to them. The constitutionality of the act has been raised in at least three cases before the court. These will come on for oral argument in the supreme court in a few days.

"STRIKE BABIES" IN DANGER.

Fund for Supplying 5,000 of Them With Milk in Chicago Is Exhausted.

Chicago, Jan. 7.—Five thousand "strike babies" are in danger of starvation. The milk fund for supplying nourishment to the babies of the striking garment workers will be exhausted to-day, and the committee of which Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen is chairman is at a loss for ways and means to continue the supply which has saved the lives of hundreds of infants during the labor struggle. "So far, we have received but $41.25 from the public following our last appeal," said Mrs. Bowen Thursday night. "We have just enough to meet the bills up to Saturday night, and there seems nothing to do but to discontinue the distribution of milk. It costs $150 a day to furnish the babies with milk. Discontinuance of the milk distribution will mean the jeopardizing of the health and even the lives of hundreds of innocent babies weakened by lack of sufficient nourishment."

ROBIN IS INDICTED AGAIN.

Eight More True Bills Against New York Financier.

New York, Jan. 7.—Eight additional indictments, charging the further larceny of $217,000 were returned against Joseph G. Robin, recently indicted on the charge of larceny of $80,000 from the Washington Savings bank, by the grand jury yesterday afternoon. A subpoena summoning former District Attorney Jerome, Robin's counsel, to testify before the grand jury was served upon Mr. Jerome yesterday afternoon. Mr. Jerome had refused to produce books and records of the Railway Traction and Construction company, of which Robin was the moving spirit, on the ground that they might incriminate his client, Judge Swann will decide Monday whether they shall be produced.

ANOTHER SENATOR ELKINS.

Son of the Senator from West Virginia to Be Appointed to Fill Term.

Washington, Jan. 7.—Governor Glasscock of West Virginia will pay a tribute to the memory of Senator Elkins in the form of the appointment of his son, Elkins, eldest son of Senator Elkins, to serve in the Senate until his successor has been chosen by the Democratic legislature the latter part of this month. It is expected that Mr. Elkins will be appointed immediately after his father's funeral. He probably will not serve more than two weeks.

Marietta, Mass., June 1, 1910. I can frankly say that Parisian Sage has given me perfect satisfaction and will highly recommend it as a hair grower and beautifier, and a sure cure for dandruff. I also have recommended it to several people, and it has given wonderful results.—Mrs. G. Bartenex, 29 Main street, Cynthia, Ky., June 3, 1910. I have only used two bottles of Parisian Sage, and I find my hair has increased wonderfully in thickness and luxuriance and beauty. The dandruff all disappeared. I was wonderfully surprised, as I have tried many hair restorers, though I have found none that ever has helped my hair except Parisian Sage, so I can say it is worth all of the hair restorers I have ever found, and I will tell many friends about it. Gratefully your friend, Miss M. Clough, box 212.

Item for Women

The Red Cross Pharmacy guarantees Parisian Sage to kill dandruff germs, eradicate dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp, or money back. It is the most delightful and refreshing hair dressing in the world and is not sticky or greasy. The Red Cross Pharmacy and druggists everywhere sell it for 50 cents a large bottle. The girl with the auburn hair is on every package.

Gladdness comes with a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed and assisted by the pleasant laxative remedy Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. To get its beneficial effects always buy the genuine manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co.

LORIMER STORM ABOUT TO BREAK

Beveridge Minority Report in Bribery Case to Be Submitted to the Senate Monday.

Washington, Jan. 7.—Senator Beveridge of Indiana has completed his minority report on the case of Senator Lorimer, who has been investigated with reference to the charge that his election was the result of legislative bribery. The minority report, which will be submitted to the Senate on Monday, will contend that Senator Lorimer is not entitled to remain in the Senate. Beveridge has been working on the evidence day and night since Congress adjourned for the holidays.

Had the fight on Lorimer opened on Thursday, Senator Owen would have made the opening speech. As it is, Senator Beveridge is expected to be the first to take the floor. Lorimer is remaining here, because he has been advised that the storm in the Senate is about to break.

Senator Aldrich is trying to get the whole matter referred back to the committee for further investigation. If this be done, it will mean no action by the Senate at this session. But senators declare that if it is referred it will not be done until the whole situation with respect to the alleged bribery has been aired.

Should the matter go over until next session, the number of defenders of Lorimer in the Senate will be diminished, and the number hostile to the retention of his place will be increased. Hence there is considerable speculation as to why any of his friends should want the matter to go over.

Item for Women

Senator Root, according to latest reports, is to come out against Lorimer.

Cleveland, O., Jan. 7.—The high cost of living is blamed for most divorce by Judge W. B. Nell, who, during the term just ended, granted 428 separations, breaking the record for Cuyahoga county.

"High prices coupled with small incomes, resulting in an intense struggle to keep up appearances and gratify social ambitions are responsible for the wrecking of a large number of homes," said the judge.

"Perhaps if we adopted the prudential marriage system of Europe we should be better off. Courtship in America is often a mere social masquerade. Lovers never see each other except when at their best, and consequently the young woman marries a hero and the young man an angel, only to be disillusioned shortly after the wedding day."

Chicago, Jan. 7.—The fourth bomb in the neighborhood about Princeton and Archer avenues and Twenty-second street early yesterday wrecked the saloon of J. Marchese. Patrolman Halmer of the Twenty-second street station was passing the place at the time of the explosion and was knocked down and stunned by the explosion. Twenty-five tenants in a lodging house above the saloon were routed out by the explosion, but none was injured. Whether the explosion may be identified as of gambling, personal spite or of labor origin the police are unable as yet to say. Marchese declared that he had received no threatening letters and had no personal enemies who might have been responsible for the affair.

CZAR SWINGS TO GERMANY?

France and Britain Show Jealousy

RUSSO-GERMAN ENTENTE

On Persia Formulated—The Germans Disclaim Political Aims—Russia Promises to Help Bagdad Railway Project.

London, Jan. 7.—An evening paper publishes what purports to be the text of an agreement between Russia and Germany in Persian affairs and supposed to be a result of the meeting of Emperor William and Emperor Nicholas at Potsdam last November.

According to the text printed, Germany disclaims any political interest in Persia and recognizes Russia's interests in northern Persia. Russia, on her part, agrees to co-operate in building the long proposed Bagdad railway and its branches, and to give German commerce in Persia equality of treatment.

This important pact quite likely will be resented by France and Great Britain as disloyalty on Russia's part to their entente.

The sequel of the visit of the Russian monarch in Germany has been anticipated jealously in England, where it was believed that the too cordial relations between Germany and Russia would have been followed by a better understanding, possibly to the disadvantage of this country.

JAPAN NOT IN SHAPE FOR WAR

Press Declares There Is No Desire to Fight This or Any Other Power.

Victoria, B. C., Jan. 7.—Japanese newspapers received yesterday devote much space to comments on the dispatches regarding the inadequacy of the Pacific coast defense of the United States. The Japanese editors protest against the inference that Japan is unfriendly to the United States.

Collating a number of comments, the Eibun Tsushin, a Tokio news agency, says: "It is strange but true that the fever of Americanophobia, supposed to be rife in Japan, is not known in Japan. It must be stated candidly that Japan is not in a position to fight against a foreign country, be it America, England, or Germany."

"While we admit that Japan and America have great interests in China these interests are of a commercial character, and will not affect in the least degree the political and commercial positions commanded by both these countries."

"What reason could there be in advocating in any way a war between Japan and America? Foreigners may be assured that Japan neither is at present nor will be in the future in a fighting mood because all the Japanese, in spite of the increasing population and other considerations, find the fact to be that it does not pay to fight with a country which is superior in every respect to her."

Could Not Smell Nor Hear.

Mrs. A. L. Wetzel, 1023 Ohio St., Terre Haute, Ind., writes:

"When I began to take your medicine I could not smell, nor hear a church bell ring. Now I can both smell and hear."

"When I began your treatment my head was terrible. I had buzzing and chirping noises in my head."

"I followed your advice faithfully and took Peruna as you told me. Now I might say I am well."

"I want to go and visit my mother and see the doctor who said I was not long for this world. I will tell him it was Peruna that cured me."

People who object to liquid medicines can now secure Peruna tablets.

are not very reliable, it does give the housewife a comfortable feeling to have a big jar full of nice eggs that have not cost over 25 cents a dozen and this is how to do it.

First procure the eggs when cheap, which is about April first. And be sure they are fresh laid. Then take one pint of unslacked lime, slant with a pint of boiling water, and nine quarts of cold water and ½ pint table salt. Place eggs carefully in jar. After the lime is cold and settled dip the clear liquid in to the eggs. Be sure to keep covered with water all winter. To insure that put a piece of cloth over with a plate or a piece of board to keep them down. Will keep indefinitely.

Care of Indoor Plants.

How many of us cherish a little gem which we have brought indoors from the summer; how many of us strive for a little spot or green indoors and sometimes fail?

We may lack knowledge of a few elemental truths about plant life. Nature, if given half a chance, will assert herself. If you cannot rear plants something is wrong in your treatment of them. Sun, water and air are the requisites of growth, with good soil that must be renewed from time to time. Deprive a plant of sunlight and it will become pale and colorless.

A Japanese fern ball is an attractive plant to hang in a living room or the nursery. It manages to get fresh air, but demands much water. The most successful way to give it its daily food is to soak the ball in a basin of water. Spraying is not sufficient. You will notice the difference in the extra shoots that appear and in the general healthy condition of the plant.

When watering plants a fine spray is the best thing to use. It fines the dust from the leaves at the same time that it waters the roots. Frequent washing of the leaves, by the way, is quite necessary in order to give clear openings for the respiratory process.

Do not neglect the pruning of indoor plants. Weak leaves, buds or branches should be cut off from the main stock. Better results will inevitably follow. Do the same with a few blossoms. This treatment sends the nourishment of the plant into fewer cells and increases the growth. It is the method that is adopted by all successful florists, says the Philadelphia North American.

If Jack Frost hints of a visit, put a newspaper packet over each plant. Pin the paper, that is a cheap protection against cold, around the plants. Especially is this needed for plants that are in window boxes or near
